This game is right up my alley, I really enjoy it but would love to play it with friends. Hopefully it could be cross-platform with PSVR some day.. I highly recommend this game.

Totally different than other current VR games. You will spend around 10h just in single playermode and after you have beaten bot's you would think that you are good but you are so wrong.. :D. This game is a real tribute to the stuff you can do with vr. The devs have worked really hard to make use of the unique oportunites that vr presents such as interactive crafting to create and modify units and a bow to use in the midst of battle to support these units. If nothing else you should give this game a go becuase it represents the awesomeness that vr can be if we demonstrate to the bigger companies who have pulled out of developing vr games just how it should be done. (And becuase it is awesome.) The only warning i will give to prospective players, and it is something the devs themselves have highlighted on this page, is that this game is designed primarily as a pvp and multiplayer game. The playerbase is low right now becuase it is a new game from a small company. But if people dont buy it for this reason it will never have enough of a playerbase to attract new players. So i would suggest that you break the catch 22 and give it a go.. This is a really promising project that is already a lot of fun, and I'm sure will be even better down the road with more fun stuff to unlock and different ways to interact with the battlefield. You can dive right in and have a good time, and I can tell there's a lot more nuance to it than i've had time to figure out so far.
